Valuable Family Medicines.

JUST received direct from the proprietors, the following valuable Medicines, all of which have been in use for a number of years past, in almost every part of the United States; have been highly patronized by people of the first respectability; and approved by those who have had occasion to make use of them, for the cure of those disorders, for which they are severally calculated.

Dr. Lee's Genuine (Windham) Bilious Pills,

Universally known and used throughout the United States as a Family Medicine. The fame of these pills has become so great that many have attempted to counterfeit them—to guard against this, the proprietors have procured a Stereotype Label, and each box of Genuine Lee's Pills will hereafter be enclosed in one of these labels, with these words on the sides; "Lee's Genuine Windham Billious Pills," and on the end of the Label the words, "Samuel Lee, patentee, &c. I. Thompson, agent, joint proprietor," &c. and should any be offered for sale without said Label on them, the purchaser may be apprised that they are counterfeit.

Dr. Thompson's Celebrated Eye-Water:

For the cure of inflamed and sore eyes of almost every description. This valuable preparation comes highly recommended from the most respectable sources. Price 50 and 25 cents a bottle.

Dr. Rawson's Genuine Itch Ointment:

A certain and safe cure for that disagreeable complaint, as well as other irruptions of the skin. Price 37½ cents a box.

CORRESPONDENCE,

Between Major General Jackson, and Brevet Major General Scott, on the subject of an order, bearing date the 22d April, 1817; published by the former, to the troops of his division, and printed about the same time, in most of the public papers.

(Concluded)

LETTER II.

GEN. JACKSON TO GEN. SCOTT.

Head Quarters, 1st and 3d Military Departments,
New-York, Oct. 4th, 1817.

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th ultimo, together with the two papers therein enclosed.

I am not the author of the miserable and unmeaning article copied from the "Columbian," and (not being a reader of that "Gazette) should probably never have heard of it, but for the copy you have sent me.—And whilst on the subject of writing and publishing, it may save time, to say, at once, that with the exception of the substance of two articles which appeared in "The Enquirer," last fall, and a journal kept whilst a prisoner in the hands of the enemy, I have not written, or caused any other to write a single line for any Gazette whatever, since the commencement of the late war.

Conversing with some two or three private gentlemen, about as many times on the subject of the division order, dated at Nashville, April 22d, 1817; it is true that I gave it as my opinion, that that paper was, as it respected the future, mutinous in its character and tendency, and as it respected the past, a reprimand of the Commander in Chief, the President of the United States—for although the latter be not expressly named, it is a principle well understood, that the war department, without at least his supposed sanction, cannot give a valid command to an ensign.

I have thus, sir, frankly answered the queries addressed to me, and which were suggested to you by the letter of your anonymous correspondent—but on a question so important as that which you have raised with the War Department, or in other words with the president of the United States, and, in which, I find myself incidentally involved, I must take leave to illustrate my meaning a little, in doing which, I shall employ almost the precise language which was used on the occasions above alluded to.

Take any three officers—Let A be the common superior, B the intermediate commander, and C the common junior. A wishes to make an order, which shall effect C. The good of the service, etiquette and courtesy, require, no doubt, that the order should pass through B: or if expedition and the dispersed situation of the parties make it necessary to send the order direct to C, (of which necessity A is the judge,) the good of the service, etiquette and courtesy require, with as little doubt, that A notify B thereof, as soon as practicable. Such notice of itself, has always been held sufficient, under the circumstances last stated. But we will suppose that A sends the order direct to C, and neglects to notify B thereof—and such appears to be the precise case alluded to in the order before stated. Has B no redress against this irregularity? He may unquestionably remonstrate with A in a respectful manner; and if remonstrance fails, and there be a higher military authority than A, B may appeal to it for redress.—Now in the case under consideration, there existed no such higher authority—the war department, or in other words, the President, being the common superior, (A), and the general of Division, the intermediate commander (B). A private and respectful remonstrance, therefore, appears to have been the only mode of redress which circumstances admitted of. An appeal to the army or the public, before or after such remonstrance, seems to have been a greater irregularity than the measure complained of; to reprobate that measure publicly, as the division order does, was to amount still higher in the scale of indecorum, but when the order goes so far as to prohibit to all the officers in the division, an obedience to the commands of the President of the United States, unless received through division head quarters, it appears to me, that nothing but mutiny and defiance, can be understood or intended.

There is another view of this subject, which must have escaped you, as I am persuaded there is not a man in America less disposed to shift responsibility from himself to a weaker party than yourself. Suppose the war department, by order of the President, sends instructions direct to the commanding officer, perhaps a captain at Natchitoches (a post within your division) to attack the body of Spanish royalists nearest to that frontier, if the captain obeys, you arrest him—but in compliance with your prohibition, he sets the commands of the president at naught, he would find himself in a direct conflict with the highest military authority, under the Constitution, and thus would have to maintain against that "fearful odds," the dangerous position laid down in your order.—Surely this consequence could not have been foreseen by you, when you penned that order.*

I must pray you to believe, sir, that I have expressed my opinion on this great question, without the least hostility to yourself, personally, and without any view of making my court in another quarter, as is insinuated by your anonymous correspondent. I have nothing to fear or hope from either party. It is not likely that the executive will be offended at the opinion, that it has committed an irregularity in the transmission of its orders; and as to yourself, although I cheerfully admit that you are my superior, I deny that you are my commanding officer, within the meaning of the 6th article of the rules and articles of war. Even if I belonged to your division, I should not hesitate to repeat to you all that I have said, at any time, on your subject, if a proper occasion offered—and what is more, I should expect your approbation, as in my humble judgment, refutation is impossible.

As you do not adopt the imputations contained in the anonymous letter, a copy of which you enclosed me, I shall not degrade myself by any further notice of it.

I have just shewn the article from "The Columbian" to some military gentleman of this place, from whom I learn it was probably intended to be applied to a case which has recently occurred at West Point. The writer is supposed to proceed upon a report (which is nevertheless believed to be erroneous) that brigadeer Gen. Swift had orders from the war department more than twelve months since, to remove capt. Patridge, from the Military Academy, and that he suppressed those orders, &c. The author is believed to be a young man of the army, and was, at the time of publication, in this city; but not under my command, and with whom I have never had the smallest intimacy. I forbear to mention his name because it is only known by conjecture.

I have the honor to be, &c.
Signed W. SCOTT.

LETTER III.

GENERAL JACKSON TO GENERAL SCOTT.

Head Quarters, Division of the South,
Nashville, Dec. 3rd, 1817.

SIR,

I have been absent from this place a considereble time, rendering the last friendly office I could, to a particular friend, whose eyes I closed on the 20th ult. Owing to this, your letter of the 4th of October, was not received until the first instant.

Upon the receipt of the anonymous communication, made me from N York, I hastened to lay it before you; that course was suggested to me, by the respect I felt for you as a man and a soldier, and that you might have it in your power to answer how far you had been guilty of so base, and inexcusable conduct independent of the services you had rendered your country; the circumstance of your wearing the badge and insignia of a soldier, led me to the conclusion, that I was addressing a gentleman. With these feelings you were written to; and had an idea been for a moment entertained, that you could have descended from the high and dignified character of a Major General of the United States, and used language, so opprobious and insolent, as you have done; rest assured, I should have viewed you, as rather too contemptible to have held any converse with you on the subject. If you have lived in the world thus long, in entire ignorance of the obligations and duties which honor impose, you are indeed, past the time of learning; and surely he must be ignorant of them, who seems so little under their influence.

Pray, sir, does your recollection serve, in what school of philosophy you were taught; that to a letter enquiring into the nature of a supposed injury, and clothed in language decorous and unexceptionable, an answer should be given, couched in pompous insolence and bullying expression? I had hoped that what was charged upon you by my anonymous correspondent, was unfounded; I had hoped so, from a belief that General Scott was a soldier and a gentleman; but when I see those statements doubly confirmed by his own words, it becomes a matter of enquiry, how far a man of honorable feelings can reconcile them to himself, or longer set up a claim to that character. Are you ignorant, sir, that had my order, at which your refined judgment is so extremely touched, been made the subject of enquiry, you might, from your standing, not your character, have been constituted one of my judges? How very proper then, was it, thus situated, and without a knowledge of any of the attendant circumstances, for you to have prejudged the whole matter. This at different times, and in the circle of your friends, you could do, and yet had I been arraigned, and you detailed as one of my judges, with the designs of an assassin, lurking under a fair exterior, you would have approached the holy sanctuary of justice. Is conduct like this congenial with that high sense of dignity, which should be seated in a soldier's bosom? Is it due from a brother officer to assail in the dark, the reputation of another, and stab him at a moment when he cannot expect it? I might insult an honorable man by questions such as these, but shall not expect that they will harrow up one, who must be dead to all those feelings, which are the true characteristic of a gentleman.

In terms, polite as I was capable of noting, I asked you if my informant had stated truly—if you were the author of the publication and remarks charged against you, and to what extent: a reference to your letter, without any comment of mine, will inform, how far you have pursued a similar course;—how little of the gentleman, and how much of the hectoring bully you have manifested. If nothing else would, the epaulets which grace your shoulders, should have dictated to you a different course, and have admonished you, that however small may have been your respect for another—respect for yourself should have taught you the necessity of replying, at least mildly, to the enquiries I suggested; and more especially should you have done this, when your own convictions, must have fixed you as guilty of the abominable crime of detraction,—of slandering, and behind his back, a brother officer. But not content with answering to what was proposed, your overweening vanity has led you to make an offering of your advice.* Believe me, sir, it is not in my power to render you my thanks: I think too highly of myself to suppose, that I stand at all in need of your admonitions; and too lightly of you, to appreciate them as useful; for good advice, I am always thankful; but never fail to spurn it, when I know it to flow from an incompetent or corrupt source; the breast where base and guilty passions dwell, is not the place to look for virtue, or any thing that leads to virtue. My notions, sir, are not those now taught in modern schools, and in fashionable high life; they were imbibed in ancient days, and hitherto have, and yet bear me to the conclusion, that he who can wantonly outrage the feelings of another,—who, without cause, can extend injury where none is done, is capable of any crime, however detestable in its nature, and will not fail to commit it, whenever it may be imposed by necessity.

I shall not stoop sir, to a justification of my order before you, or to notice the weakness and absurdities of your tinsel rhetoric: it may be quite conclusive with yourself, and I have no disposition to attempt convincing you, that your ingenuity is not as profound, as you have imagined it. To my government, whenever it may please, I hold myself liable to answer, and to produce the reasons which prompted me to the course I took; and to the intermeddling pimps and spies of the war department, who are in the garb of gentlemen, I hold myself responsible for any grievance they may labor under on my account; with which you have my permission to number yourself.—For what I have said, I offer no apology; you have deserved it all, and more were it necessary to say more—I will barely remark in conclusion, that if you feel yourself aggrieved at what is here said, any communication from you will reach me safely at this place.

I have the honor to be,
Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed)—ANDREW JACKSON.

Brevet Major General W. Scott,
United States' Army, New-York.

The foregoing extraordinary letter was laid aside until almost forgotten. When certain of his feelings, general Scott sat down to reply to it. He thought of New Orleans and some other affairs, in which the particulars had been respectively engaged, and it appeared to him that a brace of pistols could add nothing to the character of either. He conceived that at the age he had then attained, some little reputation for temper and moderation began to be an object of his consideration, however they might be disregarded by his opponent. In fact, it did not once seriously occur to him, that the courage of either could be put in question; and, therefore, he found himself perfectly at liberty to consult his sense of justice and propriety, rather than his passions. Yet he understands, that, on this point, general Jackson shrugs his shoulders and looks mysteriously, whilst he suffers his minions to flatter him, that he has obtained a triumph. Miserable vanity! Most puerile and unworthy conceit! A triumph over the fears of general Scott! The latter does not doubt the courage of general Jackson, yet he might enumerate several affairs, in any one of which, he was, probably, exposed to greater personal danger than general Jackson has encountered in his whole military career. And here let him not "be called a fool for boasting;" for he may say with one of the greatest men, "mine enemy hath forced me to it." But is it a boast, in an American, to assert his indifference to personal danger? General Scott has commanded some thousands of his countrymen at different times, and does not remember three individuals among them, who were deficient in that almost universal attribute.

But the foregoing letter has been represented as a challenge, and the reply to it a non-acceptance—on the ground of religious scruples. The double falsehood will not escape the reader, altho' it be true, that general Scott, in a playful humour, chose to treat the letter as a challenge. And as to the other point, however repugnant to his principles, it may be, "to do a contrived murder," either under forms, or in violation of them; or by his own voluntary seeking—general Scott, whenever he shall think it necessary, will be as free to defend his reputation against calumny, as he would be to slay a robber who should attempt his life on the highway. He knows of no code of morals which would disarm him in either case, nor does the promise in the following letter; for as that was made without consideration, so may it be withdrawn, without explanation or apology.

* When, where? General Scott is unconscious of the fact.

You complain of harshness on my part. My letter, to which yours is a reply, is doubtless, somewhat bold in its character, but believing that in an affair with you, it was only necessary to have right on one's side, in order to obtain approbation, I had no other care in its composition, than to avoid every thing, personally offensive, as far as the truth, and a fair discussion of the subject would permit; and I still rest persuaded, that the fact corresponds with my intention. It is true that I spoke of you, and treated you as a MAN, without the petty qualifications of common usage; because in addressing you, they were then considered as so many diminutives; but I am now to apprehend that universal success and plause have somewhat spoiled you; and that I shall ultimately be obliged to fall into the common place habit, observed in respect to common place people, and consider you as nothing more than a gentleman.

Permit me to request—I think I have a right to demand—a sight of the original anonymous letter which has given rise to this discussion. If I mistake not, your correspondent is a greater personage than you, perhaps, imagine—nay so high, that he has once essayed to sit himself above the highest in our political sphere. The letter shall be returned as soon as the hand is compared with that of a certain agent of the personage alluded to.

I cannot close this letter without expressing a belief, that on the return of your wonted magnanimity, I shall be requested to burn the one which has elicited it, by way of apology for the injury it does me. Accordingly, it has been seen, as yet, but by one individual (of my staff) and shall be held in reserve, until a certain time has elapsed—attending that just expectation.—In the mean time, I shall have the honor to remain, sir,

Very respectfully,
Your most obedient servant,
(Signed) W. SCOTT.

To Major General Andrew Jackson.

No reply has ever been given to the foregoing, and of course Gen. Scott has never seen the original anonymous letter. His suspicions and the whole correspondence were fully communicated, in January, 1818, to a particular friend of Gov. Clinton, who was perfectly at liberty to give notice thereof to that personage. Whether he did so or not, General Scott is not informed. A copy of the correspondence itself would have been sent to Mr. Clinton, but for the prohibatiory regulation above cited, and which came out before general Jackson had time to reply to the letter, if he had been so disposed. General Scott, until his opponent had set him the example (a precedent not disapproved by the war Department) suppose that the first sentence of the regulation ("all publications," &c.) interdicted manuscript copies as well as others. Until then a distinction of this sort appeared to him absurd; for how easy would it be for any of the numerous persons to whom Gen. Jackson has delivered copies, or rather parts of correspondence, to print them? The moment they passed out of his hands they ceased to be under his controul.

After all, it is possible that the suspicions above expressed are unjust, as it respects one individual; although there is not room to doubt, that the anonymous letter was written to serve the views of Mr. Clinton, and that those views have been effected, at least so far as they respect General Jackson. Should General Scott ever discover or find cause to believe, that Mr. Clinton neither wrote nor dictated the anonymous letter, there is no apology which one gentleman may prescribe to another, that shall not be promptly and cheerfully rendered.

And here, General Scott must, in candor, state, that sometime during the summer or fall of 1818, when a threat of General Jackson's (that he meant to visit New-York for the purpose of "calling out" Gen. Scott—published in a Georgia paper, on information derived, as was said, from an officer direct from Florida) was mentioned in the hearing of Mr. Clinton, the latter replied—"General Jackson would have enough to do if he undertook to fight every body who thinks with General Scott on the subject of the famous order,"—intimating thereby, that he (Mr. Clinton) was still one of those persons. General Scott's informant, who had previously heard of the suspicion entertained in respect to the anonymous letter, was certainly impressed, in that incidental conversation, with the idea, that Mr. Clinton had no agency in dictating the letter. General Scott would be very well content to yield himself to the same belief.

LETTER IV.

GENERAL SCOTT TO GENERAL JACKSON.

Head Quarters, 1st and 3d Military Departments.
New-York, January 2nd, 1818.

SIR,

Your letter of the 3d ultimo, was handed to me about the 22d, and has not been read, I might almost say thought of, since. These circumstances will show that it is my wish to reply to you dispassionately.

I regret that I cannot accept the challenge you offer me. Perhaps I may be restrained from wishing to level a pistol at the breast of a fellow being, in private combat, by a sense of religion; but lest this motive should excite the ridicule of gentlemen of liberal habits of thinking and acting, I beg leave to add, that I decline the honor of your invitation from patriotic scruples. My ambition is not that of Erostratus. I should think it would be easy for you to console yourself under this refusal, by the application of a few epithets, as coward, &c. to the object of your resentment, and I here promise to leave you until the next war, to persuade yourself of their truth.

Your famous order bears date the 22nd April, 1817. At intervals of three or four months thereafter—that is, when it had been officially published to the troops of your division, and printed in almost every paper in the Union—as if to challenge discussion—I found myself in company where it was the subject of conversation. Not being under your command, I was as free to give my opinion on that public act as any one else; for I presume you will not assert that where an officer is not expressly restrained by the military code, he has not all the rights of any other citizen. For this fair expression of opinion, on a principal as universal as the profession of arms—and which opinion I afterwards, at your instance, stated to you in all its detail, you are pleased to charge me with having slandered you behind your back!! an accusation, which I consider the more amusing, as I never had the honor of being in your presence in all my life! I can assure you, sir, that nothing but my great respect for your superior age and services, prevents me from indulging, also, in a little bitter pleasantry on this point.

It seems that you are under the further impression that if you had been brought to trial for publishing that order—(an idea that I never heard any other suggest,) and I appointed one of your judges, that assassin-like I should have approached the holy sanctuary of justice, &c.—such is I think your language.—Now like you, (without believing one word of it) it would be as easy for me, (manually) to retort all this abuse, as it was for you to originate it; but I must inform you, sir, that however much I may desire to emulate certain portions of your history, I am not at all inclined to follow the pernicious example that your letter furnishes.

Norfolk, April 5.

The U. S. frigate Congress, Capt. John D. Henley, got under way from the Navy-Yard at Gosport, on Saturday about 15 minutes before, and anchored in the Bite of Craney Island at 25 minutes after, one o'clock, whence she will sail for Annapolis first wind, after taking her powder on board. She weighed anchor with a light breeze from S. S. W. the flood tide being then only a quarter made, and with all her armament and stores (except her powder) for a two years voyage, on board, drawing 22½ feet water, she glided majestically down the channel, without meeting with the slightest obstruction, cheered with the huzzas of numerous spectators, who had assembled to witness the departure of this superior ship.

The Congress will take on board at Annapolis Mr. Graham, our new Minister to Rio Janeiro, with his family.

Alex'a. Common Council.

April 8, 1819.

Mr. Matthew Robinson, the member elected to represent the first ward, in the place of Thomas Sanderlord, resigned, appeard, was qualified, and took his seat.

The council resumed the consideration of the bill, "making appropriations for the services of the year 1819." which was read a second time, and the blanks being filled, it was read a third time and passed.

Leave was granted to bring in a bill, entitled "an act regulating the manner of appropriating money not otherwise authorized by law," which was read a first time and laid on the table.

The memorial of sundry inhabitants of the fourth ward, was received, and read, and laid on the table.

On the petition of Reuben Kirk, accompanied by a recommendation from the mayor, it is ordered, that the fine of $6 32-100 imposed upon him, be remitted.

Leave was granted to bring in a bill, entitled "an act restraining the superintendent of police and street commissioner from the expenditure of money not authorized by law," which was read a first time and laid on the table.

Extract from the minutes.

Valuable property for Sale.

THE subscriber is desirous of selling his farm, in Fairfax county, Virginia, on the Mount Vernon road, five and a half miles from Alexandria, and adjoining the lands of judge Washington, Thomson F. Mason, and Francis Adams; containing 214 acres—80 of which are in wood, and the greater part of the cleared land well adapted to timothy. The improvements are, a comfortable frame dwelling house; good barn and stables; a new smoke house; and other necessary out-houses; and a new post and rail fence, on the mail road for half a mile. The subscriber will also sell with the above property, horses, cattle, sheep and hogs; a waggon, carts, and a variety of farming utensils; household and kitchen furniture; and a good blacksmith, with his tools. Shad and Herrings

CAN be had, in any reasonable quantities, and at moderate prices, at the

White-House Fishery

of the Belvoir estate, on the river Potomac; and persons from the country, as well as water customers, are invited to that shore, where they may expect the best treatment, and every facility, in getting such supplies as they need, which that well known fishery, and the utmost attention of the subscriber, can afford. Having been long experienced in that business on the Delaware river, and having taken the fishery for several seasons, he has caused a complete outfit to be made, not only for taking Shad, as heretofore, but Herrings, of which it is well known that almost any number may be caught at that shore, when the gluts are in the river. A very complete and commodious fish-house, on the spot, may be made use of by persons disposed to put up fish extensively, and who bring barrels and salt for the purpose. A number of barrels, and a quantity of salt, may probably also be had at the fish-house.——As the

at the mouth of Pohick Creek, on the same estate, is carried on this season by Mr. John Henderson, there will be the greater certainty that customers will not be disappointed in herrings, the two fisheries being near together: but country customers are cautioned not to come too early for herrings; as, of late years, they have several times done, and by returning home have missed of getting their supply, which afterwards was plentiful.

Gunston for Sale.

THIS elegant estate is situated on the Potomac, 16 miles below Alexandria—it is bounded on three sides by the Potomac and Pohick creek, and contains nearly 3,000 acres of land, level and fertile, to which are attached six shad and herring fisheries, two of which command the river channel. This land will be laid off in four tracts, so as to have one or more fisheries to each; these tracts will be again divided if requisite. This estate is level and beautifully situated, very fertile, and remarkably healthy. Plaister acts with an effect equal to that of any part of Virginia or Pennsylvania.—I have used 500 bushels in twelve months, and such is its beneficial operation, that were I to keep this land I should considerably increase the quantity. A manufacturing mill is distant about two miles, on a stream navigable for vessels carrying 1200 bushels of wheat, where the Baltimore and Dist. of Columbia prices are given for grain: being bounded on 3 sides by water, a small extent only of fence is necessary to inclose the whole: it would be admirably adapted to grazing. The improvements are a large and very substantial brick mansion, 40 by 70 feet, with every necessary outhouse, three commodious barns, houses for Negroes, and fish houses at each of the fisheries. 120,000 bricks and 1000 bushels of lime are just burnt on the premises. There is a considerable extent of live fence, both useful and ornamental, two orchards of well selected apples and peach, besides an abundance of other choice fruit. More than 150 acres are in clover, 200 in corn, and land is in preparation for sowing 250 bushels of small grain. Any quantity of hay can be cut from the low grounds, some of which (and all might,) have been reclaimed at a trifling expense. The river and creeks, abound with wild fowl, particularly canvass backs, the woods with deer and a variety of other game. Mules, cattle, highly improved sheep, farming utensels and household furniture can be had. The terms of sale will be accommodating. Property in any of the cities, negroes, bank stock, western lands, or lands near the Ridge, will be taken in payment.—Letters must be addressed to me at Pohick Church, Fairfax county, Virginia.

September 4 GEORGE MASON.

Valuable Property for Sale.

THE subscriber is desirious of selling a handsomely situated farm, on Hunting creek, in Fairfax county Virginia, adjoining the Mount Vernon estate and the lands of general Thomson Mason, four miles from Alexandria, containing about 240 acres, 80 of which are in wood—40 to 50 in thriving meadow of clover and timothy—a part of the residue recently seeded with wheat and rye, and clover, last spring—the whole enclosed with a new post and rail fence.—The improvements are, a comfortable and convenient frame dwelling house and kitchen, smoke house, poultry house, granary and stables.—There is on this place a rich and productive garden, and a large body of marsh meadow, from which may be saved annually 100 tons of hay, nearly as nutricious as the best timothy or clover.—With the farm would be sold a number of very valuable horses, cows and sheep; waggon, carts, and a variety of farming utensils and household and kitchen furniture; corn, oats and rye, and 40 tons hay. Also, adjoining the one above described, a farm containing 160 acres, recently enclosed, on which is a brick house, which a trifling expense would render comfortable. The soil is excellent, and a considerable part might be easily converted into meadow.—it would be sold with the other or separately. Also, a number of valuable servants, male and female. To prevent unnecessary application, he would observe, that they will only be sold to persons residing in the District or its vicinity, and not to be carried from it. The subscriber will also sell the greater part of his household furniture, which is new and handsome. For terms of all or any part of the above property, apply to NOBLET HERBERT, esq. or Vaccine Institution.

THE small pox having appeared in Alexandria, such persons as have been vaccinated by the subscriber are invited to attend at his office, on St. Asaph-street, between Prince and Duke streets, to have their arms examined. Indigent persons are also invited to the same place for the purpose of being vaccinated. The subscriber will attend at his office every day in the week except Sunday, from 7 o'clock until 10 in the morning, for the purpose of receiving them.

He proposes also to be less particular than heretofore in the investigation of their claims to the benefit of the institution, as may respect their indigence and length of residence in town. The subscriber earnestly requests all such citizens as may be acquainted with persons liable to contagion, to send them without delay as above directed, where they will be served effectually and gratuitously.
